

DEEP TRAINING · CERTIFIED FREEDIVERS

DEPTH IS A SYSTEM.

AUTONOMOUS ACCESS · ELITE SUPPORT TO 90 M+

Going deep safely is about infrastructure as much as technique. Our line runs counter-ballast on 12 mm Dyneema to 145 m, with sonar depth tracking, a dedicated safety chief, in-water safety divers staged through the dive and surface oxygen on hand. It's the same rig that hosts our world-record-rated events, and you train on it every day. The minimum to train autonomously is AIDA 3, or equivalent, with a comfortable working depth around 30 m.

TWO WAYS TO TRAIN · CHOOSE YOUR SUPPORT LEVEL

TRACK 01 · AIDA 3+ · SELF-GUIDED

AUTONOMOUS TRAINING

Platform access with buddies for divers running their own plan. Lanyard, bottom plate, set depths and the buddy system. You direct the session, we provide the safety net and the infrastructure.

- Counter-ballasted mainline, depth to 145 m
- Supervising buddy safety system
- You're never alone in the water

Prices are per person in USD. The full elite setup runs three days a week, and every day in the week before a competition. Published at blueelementstore.com, October 2026.

THE PLATFORM SETUP

BUILT LIKE A COMPETITION. EVERY DAY.

No compromise between a training day and a competition day. The rig, the safety team and the protocols are the same ones that have supported national, continental and world records off this line.

EVERY WAY DOWN

- CWT constant weight, monofin
- CWTB constant weight, bi-fins
- CNF constant weight, no fins
- FIM free immersion
- Monofin and VWT on request; dry training sessions available

PLANNING A BLOCK

- 1 to 3 months is what most divers come for. Conditions are consistent year-round, so you rarely lose a day to weather.
- The winter is the season. November to May, with three competitions to build towards: November, the March Mini and the May Open.
- Record attempts need planning for ratification, judging and logistics. Tell us well ahead.

TRAIN WITH THE PEOPLE WHO DIVE IT.

A small team of freedivers, several of them national and world-record holders, runs the platform. Elite support puts one of them beside you, planning every dive, reviewing the video and debriefing each evening.

What level do I need?

AIDA 3, or equivalent, and a comfortable working depth around 30 m for autonomous training. For elite support there's no upper limit; we regularly support divers past 90 m.

Do you support record attempts?

We do. Our setup, safety team and judges have supported numerous national, continental and world records.

Can I train without a coach?

Yes. Autonomous training gives you a fully rigged platform and buddy safety supervision while you run your own plan.

What do I bring?

Your own kit: suit, fins, mask, lanyard and computer. If you're missing something, tell us before you travel. Bring your recent dive numbers so we can set the right depths from day one.

HOW TO BOOK A BLOCK

1

Send your current depth, goals and dates. Reply to our email, or use blueelementstore.com/enquire.

2

We design the block and the support level, and tell you which competition it could build towards.

3

Book online at blueelementstore.com/book, then sort travel with our Soufrière guide.
